Even the lowest priced Brinsmead Model has the true, distinctive Brinsmead tone. The moment a chord is struck, you can tell from its full, rich quality, by the long, true "singing note," that it is an instrument of no common grade. . . . The worth of a piano lies in the music that can be extracted from it, and it is the voice of the Brinsmead that endears it alike to amateur and virtuoso. . . . Beauty of case, artistic decoration and carving, much as they enhance the appearance of the instrument, are matters of a secondary importance in the construction of a
